

Ms Kong has become an infection control nurse since 2002. She has participated in different surveillance programs such as surgical site infection and outbreak management. Currently, she is a senior nursing officer working in the Chief Infection Control Officer's office providing central supports and coordination with hospital infection control teams in various infection control and quality improvement programs.