

Martin Kiernan

Martin has worked in infection prevention and control for 26 years in a variety of settings. He is a Visiting Clinical Fellow at the Richard Wells Research Centre at the University of West London and is Director of Clinical Research and Education for Gama Healthcare. Before this he was Nurse Consultant and Deputy Director of Infection Prevention and Control at Southport and Ormskirk NHS Trust in the North-West of England. He has Masters degrees in Public Health (University of Birmingham) and Clinical Research (University of Manchester).

Martin is a member of the Department of Health (England) advisory committee on antimicrobial resistance, prescribing and healthcare-associated infection (ARPHAI) was scientific secretary of the Healthcare Infection Society International Conferences in 2014 and 2016 and is a past president of the Infection Prevention Society.

His research interests centre on environmental hygiene, surveillance and urinary catheter-associated infections. He has presented at many international conferences, has published over 50 papers and articles in peer-reviewed journals.